

A Day at the High Museum of Art

By JT Barrett

On September 12, 2009 we took a field trip. Mom, Dad, JR, JM, and I got in the truck and went to Atlanta. It was the last day to see the Louvre exhibit at the High Museum of Art.

We drove through the city and I took photos of the tall buildings and video of birds, the sky, and other tall buildings. It was lunch time in the city and there were a lot of cars on the road. It felt like 3hrs to get there.

When we got there we bought a year membership. The guard gave us a photo pass so we could take pictures of the artwork. There was a sculpture of glass layers where you could see 20 of us. That was fun. I also liked the giant shape sculptures. The best piece of art was the cartoon house sculpture outside that looked like it moved.

with us. It turned out to be a triangle shape that just made it look like it moved. That is what Mom called Optic Art "art for the eyeballs".

We had dinner at Shout. It was really yummy and tasted like Jack's food. After lunch we went back to the museum at 7:00 pm for College Night. Because we are members, we could go back and see the rest of the museum.

When we drove home it was dark and we could see the kewl lights on the buildings. We took some fun light-effect photos. When I got home I was very tired and I fell asleep early. I can't wait until we go back in a few weeks for more photo fun.
